WISDOM OF MOTHER NATURE

Example is Seen in Adaptation of Deep Sea Fishes to Their Environment.

Nature is a pretty thorough workman. In her production she generally provides just those functions which are needed, and they are always the best that can be devised to do the work. The eyes of fishes are a case in point.

In the deep sea, below 200 fathoms, where very little light from the sun reaches the bottom, fishes and shrimps are found with eyes of enormous size. They require a large lens to collect what little light reaches them, and as we go deeper, and even side by side with the large-eyed kinds, we find fishes and shrimps and crab-like creatures with no eyes at all! It seems as though they had given up the attempt to see as a bad job, while some of their fellow deep-sea inhabitants are still struggling by aid of enormous lenses to get a glimpse of the almost sightless world around them. Many of these deep-sea fishes and crustaceans have no trace of eyes at all; others have what were once eyes converted into flat, plate-like structures, the use of which is unknown.

WOULD DIE AS MAN AND WIFE

Pathetic Culmination of Romance in Pennsylvania Hospital for Tuberculosis.

Without hope of recovery, both being incurable victims of the "white plague," two patients in a sanatorium at Morton, Pa., were married the other day. The romance, which terminated in the ceremony, when their cots were pulled close together so that the dying man might place the ring on the finger of his dying fiancée, began seven years ago, when to all appearances a hale and hearty man, the bridegroom was ordered to Mount Airy. The physicians had discovered the little germ in one lung, which had spread until both lungs are now nearly gone. At Mount Airy he met and fell in love with a ruddy-complexioned, healthy girl, who endeavored to nurse him back to health. In nursing him she contracted tuberculosis. She wilted and faded into a living skeleton, her condition keeping pace with his. For three years they have occupied adjoining cots, each endeavoring to cheer the other, and a few days ago, just after terrible coughing spells, they decided to die as man and wife.

CHINESE BABIES.

The Chinese adore their children; family life is very close, and all the numerous members assist in bringing up the little ones. The babies are always in the arms or on the back of mother, sister, father or brother; and as soon as they can walk they toddle about with their elders, their little bodies trussed up in wadded clothes and their yellow heads a varied pattern of small, erect pigtailed and shaven surfaces. Until they are five or six years old boys and girls are treated much alike. They are always underfoot, swarming on the streets and in the cramped houses of the poor, playing softly together in the many-roomed sectional mansions and garden courtyards of the rich. Their elders seem to enjoy having them about, perhaps partly because they are by instinct quieter than western children, having been trained for centuries to a code of reverence.—Century.

INDIAN REVEALED WEALTH.

In December, 1849, an old Indian chief informed a Hudson's Bay company blacksmith, that he knew where there was black stuff such as he was burning. Under a promise that his gun would be repaired free of charge he returned next April with his canoe full of coal. He then led a prospecting party to where Nanaimo, B. C., now stands, where coal has been mined ever since. It is estimated that the coal measures there still contain 1,344,000,000 tons of coal.

IS DISAPPOINTING.

Smith—How is your new furnace working these cold days?
Jones—It doesn't give as much hot air as the man who sold it to me.

SLOW TO GIVE UP.

"Doctor, did my brother kick about giving up smoking?"
"Yes, and he wasn't any too enthusiastic about giving up $5."

HAD TOO MUCH FAITH IN PET

Incident That Seems to Prove, as Writer Says, That "a Mule is a Mule."

E. G. W. Ferguson speaks feelingly of the mule's innate mulishness, in Outing. Of the "best" mule, he says:

I once knew a man who had a "good" mule, a saddle mule; he had her six years and used to brag of her good nature. A friend of his, who doubted the existence of so unheeded-of beast as a good-natured mule, was thoughtless enough to say so. The owner of the mule offered to prove her good nature and the friend was heartless enough to dare him. They went to the stable.

"Now," said my acquaintance, "I'm going to walk right up to that mule, never say a word, grab her tail and twist it; I guess that ought to satisfy you, eh?"

"It sure will if she don't kick," the audience replied from a safe distance.

"Don't worry, she won't kick; I know that mule," my friend rejoined. "After that I will crawl under her belly, just to show what a pet she is."

He walked up, seized his pet by the tail, and gave it a vigorous twist. The doctor summed up the net results of the experiment—three broken ribs, dislocated wrist, several lacerations of the scalp and various minor bruises. Believe me, gentle reader, "a mule is a mule."

NARROW ESCAPE

Helen—Were you ever in a street-car accident?

Harry—Yes; the car was completely wrecked, but the passengers were packed so that that only the outside layers were injured.

SYMPATHETIC COOK.

A sympathetic cook on board a Spanish ship belonging to Bilbao, in northern Spain, has been playing the role of Cupid of late. A short time ago, he captured a homing pigeon at sea, which bore on both legs rings, containing letters directed to a young lady well known in English society, the daughter of a popular peer. The letters which were distinctly of an affectionate nature, were signed by an officer in the British navy, engaged in maneuvers. The writer stated that he was disconsolate because he had little confidence in the pigeon's arrival. Whereupon the obliging cook immediately wrote the lady, placing the letters at her disposal.

WASN'T INTERESTED.

While passing along Washington street the other night Senator Edward J. Grainger of Winthrop was approached by a panhandler.

He wanted a quarter to get a night's lodging and was promptly turned down.

"You don't want to see me walking the streets all night, do you?" he asked.

"I'm not going to," was the reply. "I'm on my way home to get to bed now."

THE DISH BREAKER.

First Cook—I went to the viddy-ville show last night, an' there was a juggler there who broke at least five shillings' worth iv dishes in tin minutes.

Second Cook (indignantly)—Faith, I'd have walked out! It's a fine shate iv affairs whin an honest, hard-workin' cook lady can't attend a theayther widout bein' caricatured by some chape performer!—London Telegraph.

GOOD INTENTIONS.

Magistrate—If I let you off this time will you promise me to take the pledge?

Delighted Prisoner (excitedly)—O! will, yer honor, an' drink yer health!—Tit-Bits.

A FINE LINE OF COPY-RIGHTED ART CALENDARS.

The plans for your advertising campaign this year should by all means include a handsome Art Advertising Calendar for 1913. We have secured the exclusive agency for the Copyrighted Calendars produced by the A. M. Collins Mfg. Co., of Philadelphia.

This is one of the largest and most substantial Calendar houses in the United States, and the quality of their line is superior to that of any ever shown in this section.

This line will be handled exclusively by us in Christian and Trigg counties. It includes a great number and variety of subjects in full color, as well as some hand colored pictures of exceptional beauty.

The samples for 1913 will be in our hands shortly, and we shall be glad to show them to you at an early date. MAKE NO PLANS FOR YOUR 1913 CALENDAR UNTIL YOU SEE THIS EXTRAORDINARY LINE.
